Also, we created together the eligibility criterion: the women have to declare that they are Roma, to have used any other contraceptive methods in the last year, to currently live in Szeged and in the surrounding area and to have low income .

The questionnaire has seven sections: eligibility criteria, socio-demographic information, knowledge about STIs and contraceptive methods, medical condition and access to health services, discrimination. We manage the validation process of the questionnaire.

Preliminary data : Unwanted pregnancies are still common in Central and Eastern European countries, including Hungary. Little is known about the use of contraception in different ethnic groups. This research was undertaken to investigate the use of contraception between Roma and non-Roma women.

Roma women use any type of contraception more often than non-Roma women. However, Roma women rely more on traditional and unsafe methods such as withdrawal and lactational amenorrhea method, but significantly less
